Good Good Good

Write about the life when your mother/father was young.

Gwen, perfect! I love your writing!

When my mother was young, she lived with her grandparents in Kowloon City. She studied at St. Mary's Canossian School. It is a Catholic girls' school in Tsim Sha Tsui. She didn't like studying. It was because there was always lots of homework to do. Every day she had to do her homework from day to night. Sometimes she did homework until midnight. I think that must be very tiring for a kid. Her parents were very busy with work and they were very strict parents. She could never watch cartoons or play video games. The only TV program that she could watch was the 6:30 p.m. news. That was so boring for a kid. Other than boring things, her parents allowed her to learn many things she liked. She learned drawing, playing the piano, ballet, swimming, tennis, golf and riding bikes. She really appreciated them providing her with lots of opportunities.
